Mona Fitzgerald has inherited the Eagle Baseball Club from her father. The Eagleg' manager, Bohannan, who is in financial straits, wants her to sell it. Henry Welland, owner of the Hornets, a rival team, bribes Bohannan by a gift of $25,696 to throw the possible champion-ship to the Hornets. Copley Reeves (who loves Mona and has made a very poor impression on her) suspects the manager of treachery, Copleey's brother Punch, the Eagles' star pitcher, also falls in love with Mona and proposes to her. She evades making a direct answer. Bohannan, repenting, tries to withdraw from his bargain with Welland and Copley helps him. On the day of the season's decisive game between the Eagles and the Hornets for the pennant Welland gets Punch drunk.
